

that there could be a loss of popularity if the economy goes down.

Speaking at an event organised by the institute, the professor of economics at New York University's Stern School of Business said that the government here has chosen to focus on ideological considerations rather than economic slowdown.

Besides highlighting slowdown risks, Roubini said "problems on the street" also made foreign investors worried. He also noted that the population dividend is not an asset for India if the youth is going to be deprived of education, healthcare and, most importantly, employment. He added that the country needs to create one million jobs a month. Earlier, in an interview to ET Now, Roubini that one of the problems that India has is economic slowdown and which also explains part of its economic slowdown is that the country has not been as open on the trade and investment front. Opening up the economy to a wider range of interaction with the global economy will be part of a strategy that would lead to increasing potential growth of India, Roubini said. "It is true that a country like India can be sheltered compared to a larger economy like China or some of the superpower open economies in Asia and other parts of the world when there is a major global crisis but India needs opening up because it is going to be beneficial for potential growth," he added. The possibility of continued tension between the US and Iran, which is leading to military skirmishes, poses an additional challenge for emerging markets like India as the price of the imports is going up, Roubini said. He said that there will not be a global recession this year.

the Congress also took a swipe at the pre-budget meetings.
